Chicago Bulls' Prospectus

Close, but no cigar, has been the Bulls story for the last three years now but Coach Dick Motta and his well-disciplined band of cagers are determined to change that this time.

For the first five years of their existence the Bulls thought they were doing fine if they just made the playoffs — which they did in four of those years. It was not bad for an expansion team, but midway through the 1971-72 season the Bulls awoke to find themselves within hailing distance of the then world champion Milwaukee Bucks.

They didn t catch them, but they did begin to realize that they had not been aiming high enough. Last year they fell short of the mark, partly because of a discouraging list of injuries, most significant being the one that sidelined Tom Boerwinkle for parts of the season.

Even so the Bulls did hold first place for awhile. Boerwinkle's knee is the key to Bull hopes for a world championship, a hope that is not at all far-fetched.

ONLY 30 SECONDS separated them from victory over the Los Angeles Lakers in the first round of last year's playoffs. A healthy Boerwinkle could easily have made the difference.

Although Cliff Ray is a slightly better defensive player than Boerwinkle and has more agility, he does not run the Bulls' complicated offense as smoothly as the 6-11 Boerwinkle.

But if Boerwinkle and Ray both come back from knee problems this season, the Bulls could be more solid at center than at any time in their history.

In addition to those two, Coach Motta now has Dennis Awtrey with a year of Bulls' experience under his belt. Awtrey was plucked from the Philadelphia 76ers when Boerwinkle went under the knife and was a valuable addition to the club.

A fearless competitor, Awtrey was at his best against the league's most awesome centers.

BUT THE BULLS have never been a center-oriented team. Their offensive strength has always been at forward and so it figures to be again. Although Bob Love and Chet Walker both dropped a few points from their season average of the previous year, they combined for more than 43 points a game and still rate as the classiest pair of forwards on one team in the league.

Love was off to a slow start because of an eye injury but when he recovered he gave further evidence that he must now be rated among the league's super stars. He had three 40 point games in a single week and two of them, of 49 points apiece, were within a three-day span.

The posibility of the emergence of Howard Porter as an outstanding NBA cornerman in his third year with the club strengthens the front line additionally. Porter was a standout in preseason games and will add a new dimension to the Bull's front line if he continues his early showing.

John Hummer, obtained from the Buffalo Braves, provides some excellent rebounding skills and tenacious defense ability up front. The blossoming of Porter and addition of Hummer freed captain Jerry Sloan from front line duty and allowed him to swing back to guard where he teams with Norm Van Lier to form a fine combination.

BOTH HAVE BEEN listed on the NBA all-defensive squad in the past and Van Lier continues to hone his offensive talents, particularly as a playmaker.

Bobby Weiss comes off the bench to give the Bulls the best third guard in the league. Another plus in the backcourt was the acquisition of veteran Rick Adelman, who provides excellent playmaking and sound defensive play.

The Bulls certainly do not lack for desire and ambition. And that ambition is to first overtake the Milwaukee Bucks in the Midwest division and then break the playoff jinx that has struck them six times in a row.

MEET THE BULLS

JOHN KERR
Business Manager

One of Chicago's most popular sports personalities, John Kerr returned home to the Chicago Bulls last summer to become the club's Business Manager. Kerr's "Homecoming" came after serving two years as Administrative Vice-President of the ABA's Virginia Squires and prior to that as coach of the Phoenix Suns.

He was the original coach of the Bulls and earned "Coach of the Year" honors in the team's first season, 1966-67, when he guided the expansion team into the playoffs. The Bulls have the distinction of being the only NBA team to have two men who have achieved this lofty goal.

A native of Chicago, Kerr starred for Tilden Tech and was an All-American at the University of Illinois. He subsequently played 12 years in the NBA with the Syracuse Nationals, Philadelphia 76ers and Baltimore Bullets.

He is a member of the elite 10,000 Points club with 12,480 career points and also hauled down 10,103 rebounds. He is a member of the Citizens Savings (nee Helms) Basketball Hall of Fame and was named one of the 10 outstanding Young Men in Chicago by the Junior Chamber of Commerce in 1967. Kerr's most enduring NBA record is having played in 844 consecutive games.

MEET THE BULLS

DICK MOTTA
Coach/Director of Player Personnel

Dick Motta has always been known as his own man and now the hand that guides the Chicago Bulls is in more firm control than ever.

In addition to coaching the Bulls, he will be Director of Player Personnel with full sway over trading, drafting, and signing of Bulls' personnel.

It is only natural that Motta should be widely sought after by other pro teams. He is considered by many to be the best coach in the NBA and there is nothing in his record to suggest otherwise. In his five years at the head of the Bulls he has a lifetime record of 232 wins and 178 losses, despite two losing seasons when he was installing his disciplined brand of basketball.

In the last three years the Bulls' record has been 160-86, which means they've won nearly two out of every three games played. They've finished second to the Milwaukee Bucks all three seasons.

More impressive even than his record is the manner in which Motta achieves it. "There are probably 13 or 14 teams in the NBA with better personnel than ours," says team captain Jerry Sloan.

What Motta does with it is something else. He uses a disciplined, patterned offense revolving on six basic plays. "But each play can have as many as 25 variations," he says. 'We spend endless hours practicing our plays. Sometimes we'll have a whole two or three-hour session going over just one play."

Another bywood of a Motta-coached team is defense. Last season his team held NBA opponents to fewer than 100 points on 39 occasions. It's all based on teamwork. Not a single Bull player was on the first team all-defensive squad.

Motta began his coaching career in Grace, Idaho, where he once fired his entire high school starting five for a New Year's eve drinking escapade. Starting from scratch he won the state championship in two years and then went on to Weber State College, where his teams won six Big Sky championships in nine years.

Born in Medvale, Utah, Motta, 42, lives in Northbrook with his wife Janice and their three children.

MEET THE BULLS

PHIL JOHNSON — Assistant Coach — served four years as Assistant Coach to Dick Motta at Weber State, and was Head Coach for three years after Motta joined the Bulls in 1968.

In his three years as Head Coach at Weber State, Johnson lost only 15 games, and took Weber State to the NCAA Play-offs all three years.

While at Weber State as assistant to Motta, he was in direct charge of recruiting for the college. He played basketball for Motta in Junior High School, Senior High School and also at Weber Junior College.

IRWIN MANDEL — Controller and Financial Officer — Irwin is 31 years old and a native Chicagoan. Irwin's responsibilities with the Bulls are in the financial, accounting, and tax areas.

He joined the Bulls' organization January 1, 1973, after four years in the tax department at Arthur Andersen & Company. Prior to this, Irwin attended Northwestern University and graduated from its law school and undergraduate school.

He is a member of the Illinois Bar and a CPA.

Irwin and his wife, Sheri, are avid sports fans. They reside in Evanston.

Meet The Chicago Bulls

25 CHET WALKER 6'7" 220 FORWARD BRADLEY 1962

When Chet Walker gets hot he can score 10 points quicker than a hummingbird can bat its wings. It was by that small margin, then, that Chet failed to be a 20-points-a-game scorer last season for the first time in four years.

After averaging 22 in each of the preceding two seasons, Walker "slipped" to 19.9, the lowest of his four years with the Bulls. He totalled 1,570 points and needed only 10 more to reach the magic 20 plateau again.

But any notion that Walker is slipping as a player is greatly exaggerated. He's heard that song before. Only the year before some newspaperman had made that suggestion and Chet immediately went out and scored 56 points in a game, his best ever and the best for the entire season in the N.B.A.

The 6-7 cornerman is still regarded as the best one-on-one player in the league. He is adept at drawing fouls and deadly from the line when he gets them.

The former Bradley University star played seven years with the Syrcause Nationals and Philadelphia 76ers before coming to the Bulls in a trade for Jim Washington.

He had a single game high of 36 points last year, and pumped in 30 in one game in the playoffs.

21 RICK ADELMAN 6'2" 179 GUARD LOYOLA (Calif.)

When Jim King retired after the 1972-73 season the Bulls looked around for someone to take his place." He's Rick Adelman, a six-year veteran brought in from the Portland Trail Blazers, where he was the team captain.

"A good defensive player and good passer," according to Motta, Adelman consistently led the Trail Blazers in assists, including a club record one-game high of 17 set against Cleveland in 1971.

In recent years he also has improved his shooting percentage, once a weak spot, and gives Motta four solid guards now and "the freedom to swing Jerry Sloan to forward if we have to."

Adelman was only a seventh round draft choice of the San Diego Rockets after graduating from Loyola of Los Angeles in 1968. Perhaps the fact that he stood just a shade over 6-1 had something to do with it.

In his rookie season, he suffered a broken cheekbone and cracked jaw and in his second year a groin injury held him back. Perhaps thinking he was injury prone, the Rockets failed to protect him in the expansion draft and the Blazers grabbed him.

He proved an exceedingly durable and competent player for the Blazers. He averaged a shade under nine points for his career there while concentrating on feeding the ball to the likes of Sidney Wicks and Geoff Petrie.

Meet The Chicago Bulls

4 JERRY SLOAN 6'5" 200 GUARD EVANSVILLE 1961

If it were any other player, there might be cause for concern. You look at Jerry Sloan's scoring average last year, 10.1, and that is down more than six points a gave from the previous season. His 475 rebounds were more than 200 off his 1971-72 pace.

But fortunately Jerry Sloan is not the kind of player you measure in statistics. Sloan's ability is measured in team victories—and in floor burns. He spends more time on the floor than the patrons of a Japanese restaurant.

Sloan is the personification of the word hustle. He has said he will do anything to help win a basketball game. He will let Wilt Chamberlain knock him down and step on his face and then he will rise slowly to his feet and, with just a trace of a smile, take the ball from the referee and put it in play for the Bulls.

His all-out style of play, which appears to border on the suicidal, may not be applauded in other league cities, where fans consider him a dirty player. But Bulls' fans appreciate his total dedication to victory.

His recklessness on the court has, however, been costly in terms of pain and lost playing time. Sloan missed 13 games due to injury last season and played in pain through several more. But that's just about average for the Bulls' Mr. Hustle, who has only once in his seven-year career made it through the season without a disabling injury.

His ability to play forward and guard with equal effect makes the team captain doubly valuable. In the playoffs, he averaged nearly 15 points a game, far better than his season average, underscoring his ability to perform under pressure.

23 ROWLAND GARRETT 6'6" 212 FORWARD FLORIDA ST. 1972

Rowland Garrett stands only 6 feet, 6 inches but because of his leaping ability plays much taller. He was one of the key players in Florida State's march to the N.C.A.A. finals two years ago. It may be no coincidence that the Seminoles, despite plenty of returning talent, collapsed after Rowland left to join the Bulls.

"He's great on defense, a good leaper and does a great job on the boards," said his coach, Hugh Durham, as he sent Garrett on to the pros.

Altho he didn't get much chance to either prove or disprove his ex-coach's words in his N.B.A. rookie year, Garrett did grab 61 rebounds and score 125 points in only 211 minutes of action.

Garrett was a high school All-American in Canton, Miss., before matriculating at Florida State.

10 BOB LOVE 6'8" 215 FORWARD SOUTHERN 1961

Bob Love got off to a slow start last year and his uncharacteristic poor shooting was a cause for concern to himself, Coach Motta, and the Bulls' fans. Then it was discovered the problem was, literally, in his shooting eye. The eye problem cleared up, Love became the devastating scorer that Bulls' fans had grown to know and "love" over the previous three seasons.

He again led the team in scoring with a 23.1 average. During one brilliant span in February, he averaged 40 points a game over a five-game stretch.

Included were two 49-point performances in a three-day period. He first set a personal game high scoring total against the Milwaukee Bucks on Feb. 4, and two night later duplicated the effort against Kansas City-Omaha.

In the playoffs he averaged 23.7, which included one sizzling 38-point effort. A tireless performer, Love once again led the Bulls in minutes played.

He keeps himself in shape by playing basketball in the summer and feels this gives him an advantage. Love came to the Bulls in one of the most one-sided trades in sports history. Love and Bob Weiss were acquired from Milwaukee for Flynn Robinson.

Of course, no one knew at the time how sensational the deal was going to be. Love had never been given a chance to play for Milwaukee or the Cincinnati Royals after being drafted out of Southern University.

He didn't play at first for the Bulls, either, but Coach Motta gave him a chance in the exhibition season the next year. That's all he ever asked and no one has been able to get him out of the lineup since.

54 HOWARD PORTER 6'8" 220 FORWARD VILLANOVA 1971

Somehow Howard Porter has managed to maintain his equilibrium through a very trying break-in period. The most highly-publicized draftee ever signed by the Bulls, Porter has spent most of his first two seasons sitting on the bench.

Last year he had even less playing time than in his rookie season, but got his chance late in the year and had several good games, including an 18-point effort.

There has never been a doubt about Porter's ability to score and Coach Motta eventually took to injecting him into the lineup when the Bulls' needed a hot hand.

Porter has little trouble understanding why his playing time is limited. "Bob Love and Chet Walker are two of the best forwards in the league," he concedes.

It still doesn't make it any easier for him to play, basically, a noncombatant's role. He is used to being not only a starter, but a star. A standout high school player in Sarasota, Fla., he was an All-American at Villanova and the most valuable player in the N.C.A.A. tournament his senior year.

"I just have to keep myself in shape and be ready for when I do get my chance," says Porter.

14 CLIFFORD RAY 6'9" 235 CENTER OKLAHOMA 1971

Clifford Ray always has believed in hard work. It was a principle his father taught him in Union, S. Car. He carried it with him to the University of Oklahoma and to the Bulls and now he is going to have a rely on it more than ever.

A knee injury slowed Cliff down last year and caused him to miss virtually all of the playoffs. This after he had been named to the N.B.A. all-rookie team the year before, the only non first-round draft choice to be so honored.

Although not much of a scorer—he averaged 8.6 points—the 6-9 Ray is an intimidator on defense. His idol is Bill Russell and he has worked hard to perfect the timing that enables him, like Russell, to be a shot blocker.

Cliff did not even play basketball in high school until his senior year. Instead, he played in the band. So, although he is entering his third year in the N.B.A., his total basketball experience is more like that of a rookie.

For this reason, and because of his belief in the work ethic, the Bulls expect continued improvement from Ray this year.

Indications of what he can do when he's healthy came early last season when, in a two-week span, Ray had 20-point games against Los Angeles and Phoenix.

18 TOM BOERWINKLE 6'11" 270 CENTER TENNESSEE 1968

It was a lost season for Tom Boerwinkle last year and how the big center's knee responds to a full season of N.B.A. competition may well be the key to the Bulls' success in 1973-74.

Boerwinkle played in only parts of eight games for the Bulls last year, being idled virtually the whole time by a knee injury that ultimately required surgery.

Long Tom's four-year statistics of 9.5 points a game do not tell the whole story of his value to the Bulls. Boerwinkle has been the club's leading rebounder in each of his four healthy seasons and twice has gone over 1,000 boards in a campaign.

More important is the fact that the Bulls' offense simply runs more smoothly with Boerwinkle in the pivot.

He is not only an excellent ballhandler but sets a sturdy pick.

Boerwinkle is a self-made player. Awkward as a youngster, he did not begin playing varsity ball until his senior year in high school. Some of the rough edges were polished at the University of Tennessee, where he was the leading rebounder in the Southeast Conference, but it was virtually raw talent that was handed to Dick Motta when the Bulls made Tom their No. 1 draft pick in 1968.

He improved steadily in his four years until injurying his knee just before the playoffs in the spring of 1972.

Meet The Chicago Bulls

8 BOB WEISS 6'3" 185 GUARD PENN ST. 1965

Bob Weiss doesn't look like the kind of guy you'd nickname "The Iron Man," but then, looks have always been deceiving about Bob Weiss. The skinny left-handed guard with the thinning hair is, indeed, the N.B.A.'s iron-man, with a league-leading string of 459 games played behind him.

Bob thinks that maybe his unique role with the Bulls has something to do with it. "It's probably an advantage to me not to be starting," he says. "Statistically the fewer minutes you play, the less apt you are to be hurt."

Funny thing is, Weiss probably doesn't even realize himself that although he is billed as the sixth man on the team, only four players on the squad logged more minutes last year.

Although he almost never starts a game, he is one of the key players on the squad. When things start going bad for the Bulls, in comes Weiss, and, bang! The team starts to crackle like a string of firecrackers.

Many think he should be a starter and Coach Motta says: "For our purposes, he's the third best guard in the league." The Los Angeles Lakers probably think Motta meant first best.

Weiss always sparkles against the Lakers and in the playoffs averaged 12 points a game, which was more than three points better than his season average.

45 JOHN HUMMER 6'9" 230 FORWARD PRINCETON

This three-year veteran gives Coach Motta the maneuverability he likes. "Hummer can be both a third center and forward," says Motta, of the 6-9 Princeton star, who came to the Bulls this year in a trade for Garfield Heard.

"Hummer's just a good, all-around basketball player," amplified Motta. "His rebounds per minute are as good as anyone's in the league."

As a rookie, Hummer had 717 rebounds and averaged 11.3 points a game. Those totals, and his playing time, dropped off his last two years.

'He had an achilles injury that cut his minutes down last year," explains Motta. Hummer was a first round draft choice for the Buffalo Braves after an outstanding collegiate career at Princeton. He won an honorable mention spot on the all-rookie team after that first season.

He was an all Ivy league selection for two years at Princeton and one of nine players in school history to score 1,000 points in a career. His .564 percentage from the field in 1969 was the best in the school's history.

Portland's Geoff Petrie was a teammate of Hummer at Princeton and John's brother, Ed, played with Bill Bradley there.

Meet The Chicago Bulls

2 NORM VAN LIER 6'1" 175 GUARD ST. FRANCIS (Pa.) 1969

The day that Norm Van Lier reported to the Bulls he handed out 12 assists, prompting Coach Dick Motta to enthuse: "I can't say I don't have a playmaking guard anymore, can I?"

No he can't. In Van Lier he has one of the best, a man who compiled 567 assists last season, nearly double the total of the next highest Bull.

But Van Lier does much more for the Bulls. His quick hands steal passes on defense, more than compensating for his lack of height. His penetrating drives deep into the defensive zone give the Bulls' patterned offense more room to operate.

And although he doesn't consider himself a good shooter, he still averaged just a tick below 14 points a game last season. He did a shade better than that in the playoffs and almost single-handed kept the Bulls in the final game against the Lakers with a brilliant 28-point performance.

Van Lier also has some of the emotional makeup of a Jerry Sloan. Quick-tempered, he's among the team leaders in drawing technicals. "I play just as hard as any superstar," he says. "Nobody can ever say I loafed."

The Bulls originally drafted Van Lier third in 1969, but traded him for Walt Wesley at a time they desperately needed a backup center. He rejoined the team early in the 1971-72 season after leading the league in assists the previous year.

While he was away, he played for Bob Cousy, who helped turn him into the complete guard you see on the court whenever he performs for the Bulls.

20 DENNIS AWTREY 6'10" 250 CENTER SANTA CLARA 1970

Not a point scorer, Dennis Awtrey nevertheless gave the Bulls invaluable help in their rush to the playoffs last season. He was acquired from Philadelphia after it became apparent that Tom Boerwinkle's knee was going to require surgery.

As backup to Cliff Ray he split the playing time almost evenly and in the playoffs had to carry the whole burden when, in a bit of irony, Ray came up with a knee problem the way Boerwinkle had the year before.

A tough competitor, Awtrey played his best against centers like Wilt Chamberlain and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. In the playoffs he got 15 points in one game against Chamberlain, which was also his single game high for the season.

In one game against Milwaukee he squared off to fight Abdul-Jabbar, who was not much of a factor thereafter in a game the Bulls won. Awtrey has the faculty for keeping his abilities in perspective.

Knowing he isn't a scorer—he averaged 4.7 points a game for the Bulls—he concentrates on rebounding and getting position on defense. The 6-9 center is an aggressive player and fouled out of six games to lead the club in that somewhat dubious category.

He was drafted by the 76ers out of Santa Clara and is now ih nis fourth season in the N.B.A.

MEET THE BULLS

DR. ROBERT BIEL—Trainer—Graduate of Chicago College, Dr. Biel started in the trainer program while in medical school.

Trainer for the original team in 1966/67, he returned to the Bulls after a three-year absence, although he remained active with the Chicago franchise by working rookie and training camps.

A practicing podiatrist, Dr. Biel's background and experience qualify him better than average trainers to handle the frequent foot and ankle injuries.

MIKE McCLURE—Director of Media Relations—Joins Bulls organization after three years as director of Big Ten Service Bureau.

A native of Chicago, he graduated from DePauw University. Previously worked for City News Bureau, Chicago Tribune, Peoples Gas Company and a Lafayette, Ind., television station.

Big Ten publications he produced won back-to-back "Best in the Nation" honors from the College Sports Information Directors in 1972 and 1973. Selected for inclusion in the 1973 edition of Outstanding Young Men of America.

McClure and his wife. Brenda, have two sons and reside in Wheaton.

DICK GONSKI — Color Commentator and Analyst—has joined WSNS-TV as color commentator and analyst on all Bull road game telecasts. He comes well equipped for the post after serving four years as sales director for the Bulls.

A native of Chicago, Gonski attended DeLaSalle High School and is a graduate of Notre Dame, where he was a three-year starter for the Irish baseball squad. In 1946 he was named to the College All-American team at shortstop. He played briefly with the Milwaukee Braves farm system before starting his career in business.

Dick is 31 and resides in South Holland with his wife and three sons.

RADIO VOICE OF BULLS

JIM DURHAM

WIND Radio will again serve as the Bulls' radio outlet for Chicagoland in 1973-74, and all 82 games—home and away—will be brought to you by Jim Durham, the new radio "Voice of the Bulls."

Jim brings eight years of broadcasting experience with him in his new assignment. The 26-year old native of Chicago began his broadcasting career in 1965 with the campus radio station at Illinois State University.

He was sports director of a station in Normal, Ill., and then moved to a station in Peoria, where he served until entering military service.

Following his discharge Durham joined a station in Salina, Kan., before returning to Illinois as sports director of WJBC in Bloomington.

Durham joined the WIND staff this summer. He and his wife, Sandy, have a daughter and reside in Hoffman Estates.

VIDEO VOICE OF BULLS

ANDY MUSSER

Veteran sportscaster Andy Musser begins his first season with the Chicago Bulls, and his ninth year of following professional basketball. He served seven seasons as the radio voice of the Philadelphia 76ers and last season was the television announcer for the New York Nets.

Musser, a native of Lemoyne, Pa., is a graduate of Syracuse University and has been involved in broadcasting since he won a "Junior Sportscaster" contest at age 18.

Andy is heard around the country twice daily on his CBS Radio Network shows "Sports World Roundup" in the morning and "Game Plan" in the afternoon. He also is seen on CBS-TV as one of the NFL commentators.
